

Lake Superior

In the Ojibwe lifeway, all creation stories are true.

ma'iingan BROTHER WOLF

Ma'iingan, Ojibwe for "wolf," plays an essential role in the creation traditions of the native/tribal communities surrounding Lake Superior. From the beginning, Ma'iingan walked in tandem with Anishinaabe, or Original Man, before they diverged into separate but parallel paths that have remained connected through time.

With insight from Ojibwe elders, biologists and artist Rabbett Before Horses Strickland, a new film from Wisconsin Public Television captures enduring spiritual connections with Brother Wolf, the lasting bonds and responsibilities shared between native people and the wolf species, and the opportunities and challenges presented by the reintroduction and protection of the animals across reservation lands.

Ma'iingan: Brother Wolf is funded in part by the John & Carolyn Peterson Charitable Foundation, the Bitzer Family Legacy Fund, Eleanor and Thomas Wildrick Family, Robert & Elke Hagge, the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Focus Fund for Wisconsin Programming and Friends of Wisconsin Public Television.
